The researchers also examined the effect of the amount of water available on the growth of the plants. They found that the plants grown in the wettest conditions (100% relative humidity) had the highest growth rate, while the plants grown in the driest conditions (20% relative humidity) had the lowest growth rate. The researchers also found that the plants grown in the intermediate conditions (50% relative humidity) had a growth rate that was intermediate to the other two groups.
