1	"I cannot understand how it is that, when I look at the stars, I see a vast, empty space, and yet I feel that there is something there, something that I cannot see." (Hawking, 1988, p. 10)	When I look at the stars, I see a vast, empty space, and yet I feel that there is something there, something that I cannot see. This is because the stars are so far away that the light from them has not yet reached me. The space between the stars is not empty, but it is so vast that I cannot see it. The stars are like islands in a vast ocean, and the space between them is like the water. I can see the islands, but I cannot see the water. The same is true of the universe. I can see the stars, but I cannot see the space between them. The space is there, but it is so vast that I cannot see it. The stars are like islands in a vast ocean, and the space between them is like the water. I can see the islands, but I cannot see the water. The same is true of the universe. I can see the stars, but I cannot see the space between them. The space is there, but it is so vast that I cannot see it.
