Michigan Civil Service Commission Job Specification:

Contesting the Market Deborah M. Figart, Peggy Kahn, 1997 Using a political economy perspective Contesting the Market explores pay equity in the context of a deregulating global economy Deborah M Figart and Peggy Kahn use Michigan the quintessential example of the deindustrializing heartland as an instructive case contending that the state s decision making concerning pay equity was related to a broader politics of the economy of political parties and of debate over the appropriate roles of the state and the market Contesting the Market chronicles and analyzes the role of the national pay equity movement specific women s organizations inside state institutions and public sector unions in placing a discussion of wage discrimination on the state s agenda Figart and Kahn contend that the large scale systemic relatively technocratic efforts to create comparable worth in state government will probably have limited success Personnel Bibliography
