including privacy individual autonomy collective responsibility and joint ownership rights and proposes a raft of principles to guide the regulation of biometrics in liberal democracies Biometric identification technology is developing rapidly and being implemented more widely along with other forms of information technology As products services and communication moves online digital identity and security is becoming more important Biometric identification facilitates this transition Citizens now use biometrics to access a smartphone or obtain a passport law enforcement agencies use biometrics in association with CCTV to identify a terrorist in a crowd or identify a suspect via their fingerprints or DNA and companies use biometrics to identify their customers and employees In some cases the use of biometrics is governed by law in others the technology has developed and been implemented so quickly that perhaps because it has been viewed as a valuable security enhancement laws regulating its use have often not been updated to reflect new applications However the technology associated with biometrics raises significant ethical problems including in relation to individual privacy ownership of biometric data dual use and more generally as is illustrated by the increasing use of biometrics in authoritarian states such as China the potential for unregulated biometrics to undermine fundamental principles of liberal democracy Resolving these ethical problems is a vital step towards more effective regulation
