LEWIS MED SURG. CH. 12 QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS WITH SOLUTIONS 2024

When assessing a patient who is receiving cefazolin (Ancef) for the treatment of a bacterial infection, which data suggest that treatment has been effective?

- A. White blood cell (WBC) count 8000/ $\mu$ L, temperature 101.0 F
- B. White blood cell (WBC) count 4000/ $\mu$ L, temperature 100.0 F
- C. White blood cell (WBC) count 8500/ $\mu$ L, temperature 98.4o F
- D. White blood cell (WBC) count 16,500/ $\mu$ L, temperature 98.8o F - ANSWER C. White blood cell (WBC) count 8500/ $\mu$ L, temperature 98.4o F

This response is correct because both the WBC count and the temperature are within the normal range. A normal WBC is 4000 to 11,000/ $\mu$ L. An elevated WBC count and elevated temperature are indicators of infection.

A patient is ordered to receive acetaminophen 650 mg per rectum every 6 hours as needed for fever greater than 102° F. Which parameter would the nurse monitor, other than temperature, if the patient requires this medication?

- A. Pain level
- B. Intake and output
- C. Oxygen saturation
- D. Level of consciousness - ANSWER B. Intake and output

Because fever can lead to excessive perspiration and evaporation of body fluid via the skin, the nurse should monitor the patient's overall intake and output to be sure that the patient remains in proper fluid balance. Pain, oxygen saturation, and level of consciousness will also be monitored as with all patients, but intake and output are the priority for this patient.

The nurse determines that the patient may be suffering from an acute bacterial infection based upon which laboratory test result?
