Survey Toolbox for Aquatic Animal Diseases Angus Cameron, 2002 This text is for people working in the aquatic animal diseases and production The tools presented are valuable for anybody who needs to collect reliable information about aquatic diseases or production The structure of the book allows it to be used on three different levels Risk-based Disease Surveillance A. Cameron, F. Njeumi, D. Chibeu, T. Martin, 2014 Increasing global population and improvements in the standard of living mean that there is a rapidly increasing demand for animal protein with intensified animal production The international movement of animals and animal products has been made cheaper and faster through improved transport infrastructure Increasing human and livestock population has placed pressure on wildlife habitats resulting in closer contact between wildlife domestic animal populations and humans with spreading and re emergence of diseases as consequences of these risk factors Managing these disease threats poses enormous challenges and requires good guality information what diseases exist where they are found what impact they are having which populations are at risk how we can prevent control or eradicate these diseases Animal disease surveillance plays a central role in providing this information Risk based surveillance is not a particular technique rather it describes a general approach to undertaking disease surveillance. The principle is simple and self evident the most efficient way to find disease is to survey the animal populations that are most likely to be affected This is in contrast to the more traditional statistically based approach of taking representative samples from a population While the idea of risk based surveillance is simple the implications are complex The approach can be much more cost effective for some purposes but if misused it can lead to serious errors or it can be more expensive than traditional approaches Publisher's description A Historical Survey of Animal-disease Morbidity and Mortality Reporting National Research Council (U.S.). Committee on Animal Health, 1966 Survey Toolbox for Aquatic Animal Diseases Angus Cameron, 2002 This text is for people working in the aquatic animal diseases and production The tools presented are valuable for anybody who needs to collect reliable information about aquatic diseases or production The structure of the book allows it to be used on three different levels Manual on Livestock Disease Surveillance and Information Systems ,1999 Defining importance of diseases FAO EMPRES a new emphasis Early detection The need for surveillance What is surveillance Surveillance on the ground Putting a surveilance system in place Surveillance for what Surveillance when and how Surveillance in resource poor countries Information systems Setting the goals Determining needs and outputs Computerisation Questionnaire design Databases Data quality control Feedback The role of GIS Motivating and training field staff Awareness creation among decision makers Using surveillance as a management tool FAO involvement in surveillance and information systems development Examples of questionnaires Monthly Catalog of United States Government Publications United States.
