Cookbook Lilikoi Festival 2013, 2013-10-23 Aloha love This book of Lilikoi recipes has been compiled by the members of the Center for Spiritual Living East Hawai'i We are an intra denominational new thought church that has been serving the Big Island since 1986 Although the religious backgrounds of our members vary greatly we celebrate this diversity and find unity within the Science of Mind and Spirit of Aloha just as this book has diverse recipes that share commonality through Lilikoi When I was a young lad my grandmother would plant lilikoi passion fruit in the spring The growing season was too short to produce fruit and the vine would not survive the winter but sometimes it would produce flowers What bizarre and beautiful flowers they were One day as I was staring at a bloom for the first time my grandmother told me a story about the flower that had nothing to do with the passion of the crucifixion from which the flower originally drew its name She told me the flower should remind me to have a passion for life The ten large petals represented my ten fingers and if I counted the many curly thin petals there would be seventy two the number of beats of my heart per minute The five stamens represented my five senses and the three stigmas at the center should remind me that there is birth life and death She told me to enjoy the flower and my life today because there is no guarantee of tomorrow The next day I took my brother to see the strange flower but it had withered My grandmother was a wise woman I tell this story in hopes it will inspire you to use the recipes within this book today rather than wait and put the book on a shelf The aromas and tastes of these recipes will open you to a passion for life Pomaika i blessings Rev Tag The Little Hawaiian Lilikoi Cookbook Gail P.
