Buono,2003-07-01 The focus of this volume is on the myriad dynamics associated with these interorganizational ventures Emphasis is placed on 1 understanding the nature of these different interorganizational forms and 2 ways to enhance their effectiveness creating and sustaining complex problem solving capabilities and collaborative tendencies in a multiorganizational environment While the orientation of many of the initiatives and interventions in this volume reflects a traditional organization development OD focus emphasis is placed on working across organizational interfaces attempting to create the capacity and systemic potential for greater interorganizational learning and performance rather than releasing human potential solely within an organization see e g Cummings 1984 Consultants and researchers in this realm thus focus on spanning organizations creating and modifying networks of participants that 1 have a stake in particular interorganizational outcomes and 2 depend on those inter firm relationships and networks to accomplish their goals

Inter-organizational Networks Mark Ebers,1997 The varying organizational arrangements between firms networks are a growing field of study for economics and sociologists Whether described as strategic alliances trading networks joint ventures or regarded as a product of industry structure or local conditions they are seen as a form of economic co ordination distinct from archetypal ideas of firms and markets The purpose of this collection with contributions from European and American scholars is to blend empirical research with conceptual discussion of networks under three main headings Resource Flows Mutual Expectations and Information Flows The contributors come from varying backgrounds organization studies economics business history marketing and information systems Together they are concerned with when why and how firms engage in inter organizational networking rather than relying on arms length market relations or in house procurement

Coordination Strategies for Interorganizational Networks Franz Schober,Markus Raupp,2003 This monograph presents a framework for the formulation of coordination strategies in interorganizational networks The framework builds on the hypothesis that effective coordination strategies are contingent to bargaining power and trust exposures in the network In turn these characteristics are strongly impacted by the formal structure of the network As a consequence buyer supplier relationships ask for different strategic directions compared to strategic alliances or project networks The proposed framework is two tier with strategies on the collective network level and on the level of the individual firm After describing the essential elements of the framework the authors also apply their findings to a specific case study in German health care
