Ea, Merodach's father, overcame Apsu, the husband of the dragon Tiamat, by means of spells; he was the great magician of the gods. Merodach's division of the Ku-pu was evidently an act of contagious magic; by eating or otherwise disposing of the vital part of the fierce and wise mother dragon, he became endowed with her attributes and was able to proceed with the work of creation. Primitive peoples in our own day, like the Abipones of Paraguay, eat the flesh of fierce and cunning animals so that their strength.

Myths of Babylonia and Assyria Donald A. Mackenzie,2020-10-03 Before the dawn of the historical period Ancient Babylonia was divided into a number of independent city states similar to those which existed in pre Dynastic Egypt Ultimately these were grouped into loose confederacies The northern cities were embraced in the territory known as Akkad and the southern in the land of Sumer or Shumer This division had a racial as well as a geographical significance The Akkadians were late comers who had achieved political ascendancy in the north when the area they occupied was called Uri or Kiuri and Sumer was known as Kengi They were a people of Semitic speech with pronounced Semitic affinities From the earliest times the sculptors depicted them with abundant locks long full beards and the prominent distinctive noses and full lips which we usually associate with the characteristic Jewish type and also attired in long flounced robes suspended from their left shoulders and reaching down to their ankles In contrast the Sumerians had clean shaven faces and scalps and noses of Egyptian and Grecian rather than Semitic type while they wore short pleated kilts and went about with the upper part of their bodies quite bare like the Egyptian noblemen of the Old Kingdom period They spoke a non Semitic language and were the oldest inhabitants of Babylonia of whom we have any knowledge Sumerian civilization was rooted in the agricultural mode of life and appears to have been well developed before the Semites became numerous and influential in the land Cities had been built chiefly of sun dried and fire baked bricks distinctive pottery was manufactured with much skill the people were governed by humanitarian laws which formed the nucleus of the Hammurabi code and had in use a system of cuneiform writing which was still in process of development from earlier pictorial characters
