each price, we get the quantity supplied for the entire market by multiplying the quantity supplied by the typical firm (from the individual supply curve) by 100. At a price of $5, each firm produces 400 units, so the market supply is 40,000 units (point a in Panel A). If the price increases to $6, each firm increases production to 450 units (point c in Panel A), so the market supply is 45,000 units (point c in Panel B).

What happens if there are not identical but instead have different individual supply curves? To compute the market supply in this case, we add the quantities supplied by the hundreds of firms in the market. The assumption that firms are identical is handy, but makes it easier to derive the market supply curve from the supply curve of the typical firm, than it does to derive the market supply curve from the supply curve of the typical firm, from the market supply curve.

Market Equilibrium

Figure A4 shows a perfectly competitive market in equilibrium. For a short-run equilibrium, two conditions are satisfied:

Market Equilibrium

Panel (a) the short-run market supply curve represents the short-run market supply curve at a price of $5. It shows the quantity of 100 units per unit. The short-run market supply curve is a price of $5 and a quantity of 100 units per unit. The short-run market supply curve is a price of $5 and a quantity of 100 units per unit. The short-run market supply curve is a price of $5 and a quantity of 100 units per unit.

1. At the market level, the quantity of the product supplied equals the quantity demanded. The short-run market supply curve at a price of $5 and a quantity of 100 units per unit (Point A).
2. The short-run market supply curve is profit, given the market price. Given the market price of $5, each of the 100 firms increases profit by producing 450 units (Point B).
