Abstract

This study intends to examine how the Realistic Mathematic Education (RME) learning approach affects students' mathematical literacy skills at the primary, junior, and senior high school education levels. The Systematic Literature Review (SLR) method is employed in this investigation. 11 RME learning study findings on mathematical literacy from indexed journals published between 2016 and 2022 make up the dialysis sample. What factors, such as education level, research year, number of student samples used, or location study, affect students' mathematical literacy skills is the topic of the study. The analysis findings indicate that learning using the RME approach to mathematical literacy is increasing annually. This research is typically conducted on the island of Java with a small sample size of students, specifically less than 30 students, and junior high school students are the target population. Based on the review's findings, it can be concluded that using the RME approach to instruction can enhance or have an impact on students' mathematical literacy abilities.

INTRODUCTION

All aspects of human life cannot be separated from mathematics. The facts show that in everyday life, academic or work, everything requires the role of mathematics in the process of thinking or solving problems. Mathematics becomes an important tool that plays a role in shaping the future of individuals. This shows that someone good at mathematics will be successful in life because he can take advantage of the opportunities that exist (Turgut, 2021).

Because of the very important role of mathematics, it is not surprising that at every level of the school, there are mathematics lessons. The primary priorities of math instruction are to equip students to interact with the mathematical needs of daily life, to master fundamental numerical knowledge and skills, and to improve mathematical thinking talents that will enhance their intellectual capacity (Haylock & Thangata, 2007). But, students frequently believe that mathematics is a challenging subject. Therefore, they quit up easier and put out less effort to

Research for Educational Change Jill Adler, Anna Sfard, 2016-06-17 Research for Educational Change presents ways in which educational research can fulfil its commitments to educational practice Focussing its discussion within the context of mathematics education it argues that while research generated insights can have beneficial effects on learning and teaching the question of how these effects are to be generated and sustained is far from evident The question of how to turn research into educational improvement is discussed here in the context of learning and teaching hindered by poverty and social injustice In the first part of the book four teams of researchers use different methodologies while analysing the same corpus of data collected in a South African mathematics classroom In the second part each of these teams makes a specific proposal about what can be done and how so that its research generated insights have a tangible beneficial impact on what is happening in mathematical classrooms Combining two discourses that of researchers speaking to one another and that of researchers communicating their insights to those responsible for educational practice the book deals with the perennial question of communication between those who study educational processes and those who are directly responsible for teacher education educational research and classroom practices This book will be key reading for postgraduates researchers and academics in education and particularly in the areas of mathematics education education research teacher education and classroom practice It will also appeal to teacher educators practitioners and undergraduate students interested in educational research

A Journey through the History of Numerical Linear Algebra Claude Brezinski, Gérard Meurant, Michela Redivo-Zaglia, 2022-12-06 This expansive volume describes the history of numerical methods proposed for solving linear algebra problems from antiquity to the present day The authors focus on methods for linear systems of equations and eigenvalue problems and describe the interplay between numerical methods and the computing tools available at the time The second part of the book consists of 78 biographies of important contributors to the field A Journey through the History of Numerical Linear Algebra will be of special interest to applied mathematicians especially researchers in numerical linear algebra people involved in scientific computing and historians of mathematics

violence and human rights in South African schools and universities The rich and multifarious tapestry of scholarship and literature emanating from South African classrooms provides a fascinating lens through which we can understand the complex consequences of the economies of education social justice imperatives gendered violence in the lives of women and children and marginalised communities The scholarship in the book challenges readers to imagine alternative futures predicated on the transformational capacity of a democratic South Africa Contributors to this volume examine the many ways in which social justice and gendered violence mirror express project and articulate the larger phenomenon of human rights violations in Africa and how in turn the discourse of human rights informs the ways in which we articulate interrogate conceptualise enact and interpret quality education The book also wrestles with the linguistic contradictions and ambiguities in the articulation of quality education in public and private spaces This book is essential reading for scholars seeking a solid grounding in exploring quality education the instances of epistemic disobedience the political implications of place and power and human rights in theory and practice

South African Schooling: The Enigma of Inequality Nic Spaull, Jonathan D. Jansen, 2019-11-05 This volume brings together many of South Africa's leading scholars of education and covers the full range of South African schooling from financing and policy reform to in depth discussions of literacy numeracy teacher development and curriculum change The book moves beyond a historical analysis and provides an inside view of the questions South African scholars are now grappling with Are there different and preferential equilibria we have not yet thought of or explored and if so what are they In practical terms how does one get to a more equitable distribution of teachers resources and learning outcomes While decidedly local these questions resonate throughout the developing world South Africa today is the most unequal country in the world The richest 10% of South Africans lay claim to 65% of national income and 90% of national wealth This is the largest 90/10 gap in the world and one that is reflected in the schooling system Two decades after apartheid it is still the case that the life chances of most South African children are determined not by their ability or the result of hard work and determination but instead by the colour of their skin the province of their birth and the wealth of their parents Looking back on almost three decades of democracy in South Africa it is this stubbornness of inequality and its patterns of persistence that demands explanation justification and analysis This is a landmark book on basic education in South Africa an essential volume for those interested in learning outcomes and their inequality in South Africa The various chapters present conceptually and empirically sophisticated analyses of learning outcomes across divisions of race class and place The book brings together the wealth of decades of research output from top quality researchers to explore what has improved what has not and why Prof Lant Pritchett Harvard University There is much wisdom in this collection from many of the best education analysts in South Africa No surprise that they conclude that without a large and sustained expansion in well trained teachers early childhood education and adequate school resources South Africa will continue to sacrifice its people's future to maintaining the privileges of the few Prof Martin Carnoy Stanford
