From the moment of birth humans and animals are immersed in time all experiences and actions evolve in time and are dynamically structured The perception of time is thus a capacity indispensable for the control of perception cognition and action The last 10 years have witnessed a remarkable resurgence of interest in timing and time perception with a continuously increasing number of researchers exploring these innate abilities However existing robotic systems largely neglect the key role of time in cognition and action This is a major barrier for accomplishing the long term goal of symbiotic human robot interaction The critical question is how is time instantiated in a biological system and how can it be implemented in an artificial system Recent years have for example seen an increasing focus on the relationship between affective states and the experience of time The influence of affective states on subjective time seems to depend on the embodiment of emotions intertwined affective and interoceptive states may create our subjective experience of time Since robotic systems are in essence embodied information processing systems that interact with the real world we hope to inspire a reciprocal exchange of ideas between the field of Robotics and the Cognitive Neurosciences In this research topic we call researchers from different disciplines Robotics Neurosciences and Psychology to present their empirical work their models or reviews on the question of how time judgments are instantiated in biological and artificial systems Of particular interest are papers on time perception in humans and animals with a focused interest on embodied time perception i e the influence of affective and body states on time judgments Moreover the present Research Topic seeks to gather papers discussing the key role of time on different aspects of robotic cognition as well as modeling approaches We are interested in paving the way for a new generation of intelligent computational systems that incorporate the sense of time in their processing loop and thus accomplish more efficient and more advanced cognitive capacities
