Lectures on Metaphysics and Logic; V.4 Sir William Hamilton, Henry Longueville 1820-1871 Mansel, John 1829-1894 Veitch, 2023-07-18 This classic work on metaphysics and logic provides a deep understanding of these subjects from some of the most prominent thinkers of the 19th century With clear and concise language readers will learn about the nature of reality the limits of human knowledge and the principles of logical reasoning This book is an essential resource for anyone interested in the foundations of philosophy and logic This work has been selected by scholars as being culturally important and is part of the knowledge base of civilization as we know it This work is in the public domain in the United States of America and possibly other nations Within the United States you may freely copy and distribute this work as no entity individual or corporate has a copyright on the body of the work Scholars believe and we concur that this work is important enough to be preserved reproduced and made generally available to the public We appreciate your support of the preservation process and thank you for being an important part of keeping this knowledge alive and relevant

Lectures on Metaphysics and Logic Sir William Hamilton, 1859 The following Lectures on Metaphysics constitute the first portion of the Biennial Course which the lamented Author was in the habit of delivering during the period of his occupation of the Chair of Logic and Metaphysics in the University of Edinburgh giving these Lectures to the world it is due both to the Author and to his readers to acknowledge that they do not appear in that state of completeness which might have been expected had they been prepared for publication by the Author himself As Lectures on Metaphysics whether that term be taken in its wider or its stricter sense they are confessedly imperfect The Author himself adopting the Kantian division of the mental faculties into those of Knowledge Feeling and Conation considers the Philosophy of Mind as comprehending in relation to each of these the three great subdivisions of Psychology or the Science of the Phenomena of Mind Nomology or the Science of its Laws and Ontology or the Science of Results and Inferences The term Metaphysics in its strictest sense is synonymous with the last of these subdivisions while in its widest sense it may be regarded as including the first also the second being in practice at least if not in scientific accuracy usually distributed among other departments of Philosophy The following Lectures cannot be considered as embracing the whole province of Metaphysics in either of the above senses Among the Phenomena of Mind the Cognitive Faculties are discussed fully and satisfactorily those of Feeling are treated with less detail those of Conation receive scarcely any special consideration while the questions of Ontology or Metaphysics proper are touched upon only incidentally The omission of any special discussion of this last branch may perhaps be justified by its abstruse character and unsuitableness for a course of elementary instruction but it is especially to be regretted both on account of the general neglect of this branch of study by the entire school of Scottish philosophers and also on account of the eminent qualifications which the Author possessed for supplying this acknowledged deficiency A treatise on Ontology from the pen of Sir William Hamilton embodying the final results of the Philosophy of the Conditioned would have been a boon to the philosophical world
