The Beaks of Finches

A Laboratory Activity for the Living EnvironmentIntroduction

Environmental conditions act as selecting agents because they select organisms with the most beneficial traits to become the parents of the next generation. Within a species, individuals with variations that make them better adapted to their environment will survive and reproduce in greater numbers than those without such adaptations. Observations have shown that the offspring of better-adapted individuals inherit many of their parents' favorable variations.

Finches are small birds found in many locations throughout the world. Charles Darwin used the numerous finch species found on the Galapagos Islands as evidence of natural selection. The great variety of beak adaptations present on the Galapagos is thought to be due to the isolation of bird populations on the islands with different kinds and amounts of food. Seed-eating finches exhibit a great number of differences in beak shapes and sizes. During ongoing competition for resources, some finches are successful and become more numerous, while less successful finches decrease in number.

In this laboratory activity, you will work with different tools that will serve to model finch "beaks." The seeds provided represent finch food on a particular island. You will compete with other "finch" species to see which "beak" is best adapted for obtaining a specific food.

Objectives

In this laboratory activity, you will:

- learn how structural differences may affect the survival rate of members within a species
- simulate competition for resources among different species of organisms
- see the role of the environment as a selecting agent

Safety

- You should wear safety goggles for this activity.
- Handle the tools carefully. They may have sharp edges and could cause cuts.
- Be especially careful when two or more of you are reaching for seeds at the same time. The "beak" being used by one student has the potential to strike another student.
- Do not taste or eat any of the seeds.

Important Note: Record all of your data and answers on these laboratory sheets. You will need to keep them for review before the Regents Examination. Later, you will need to transfer your answers to a separate Student Answer Packet. Your teacher will use it in grading your work, and the school will retain it as evidence of your completion of the laboratory requirement for the Living Environment Regents Examination.*
