Silent Partners Amy M. Froide, 2016-10-06 Silent Partners restores women to their place in the story of England's Financial Revolution Women were active participants in London's first stock market beginning in the 1690s and continuing through the eighteenth century Whether playing the state lottery investing in government funds for retirement or speculating in company stocks women regularly comprised between a fifth and a third of public investors These female investors ranged from London servants to middling tradeswomen up to provincial gentlewomen and peeresses of the realm Amy Froide finds that there was no single female investor type rather some women ran risks and speculated in stocks while others sought out low risk low return options for their retirement years Not only did women invest for themselves their financial knowledge and ability meant that family members often relied on wives sisters and aunts to act as their investing agents Moreover women's investing not only benefitted themselves and their families it also aided the nation Women's capital was a critical component of Britain's rise to economic military and colonial dominance in the eighteenth century Focusing on the period between 1690 and 1750 and utilizing women's account books and financial correspondence as well as the records of joint stock companies the Bank of England and the Exchequer Silent Partners provides the first comprehensive overview of the significant role women played in the birth of financial capitalism in Britain

Classified list with author and title index The Indian National Bibliography ,2017-04 Modularity in Motor Control: From Muscle Synergies to Cognitive Action Representation Andrea d'Avella, Martin Giese, Yuri P Ivanenko, Thomas Schack, Tamar Flash, 2016-04-21 Mastering a rich repertoire of motor behaviors as humans and other animals do is a surprising and still poorly understood outcome of evolution development and learning Many degrees of freedom non linear dynamics and sensory delays provide formidable challenges for controlling even simple actions. Modularity as a functional element both structural and computational of a control architecture might be the key organizational principle that the central nervous system employs for achieving versatility and adaptability in motor control. Recent investigations of muscle synergies, motor primitives, compositionality, basic action concepts, and related work in machine learning have contributed to advance at different levels our understanding of the modular architecture underlying rich motor behaviors. However, the existence and nature of the modules in the control architecture is far from settled. For instance, regularity and low dimensionality in the motor output are often taken as an indication of modularity but could they simply be a byproduct of optimization and task constraints? Moreover, what are the relationships between modules at different levels such as muscle synergies, kinematic invariants, and basic action concepts? One important reason for the new interest in understanding modularity in motor control from different viewpoints is the impressive development in cognitive robotics. In comparison to animals and humans, the motor skills of today's best robots are limited and inflexible. However, robot technology is maturing to the point at which it can start approximating a reasonable spectrum of isolated perceptual, cognitive, and motor capabilities. These advances allow researchers to explore how these motor, sensory, and cognitive functions might be integrated into meaningful architectures and to test their functional limits. Such systems provide a new test bed to explore different concepts of modularity and to address the interaction between motor and cognitive processes experimentally. Thus, the goal of this Research Topic is to review, compare, and debate theoretical and experimental investigations of the modular organization of the motor control system at different levels. By bringing together researchers seeking to understand the building blocks for coordinating many muscles for planning endpoint and joint trajectories and for representing motor and behavioral actions in memory, we aim at promoting new interactions between often disconnected research areas and approaches and at providing a broad perspective on the idea of modularity in motor control. We welcome original research, methodological, theoretical, review, and perspective contributions from behavioral, system, and computational motor neuroscience, research, cognitive psychology, and cognitive robotics.
