Materials

Dolphin Article

Strategies/Activities

1. Teacher should start class by stating the purpose of articles. The purpose of articles is to tell people different types of information. It is when they give you a lot of research information in only a paragraph or a few pages.
2. The teacher should explain the different parts of an article by writing these on the board.
 - Headline-the title or your article. What it is about.
 - Lead paragraph/Intro-gives readers facts and information on why they want to know about their topic
 - Supporting Details-give more facts about their topic, supports their leading paragraph, gives more in-depth information
 - Conclusion-wraps up an article by repeating it's purpose or gives another interesting fact.
3. The students should then be put into pairs. They are given a dolphin article and have to find the various parts. Each pair of students has the same article, so when all the students are done the class will go over the correct answers. (Included with article).
4. The students now have to write their own short article. They can write about their family, a friend, a hobby, or a favorite food. The article should be at least two paragraphs.

Closure

Teacher goes over the different parts of an article (headline, lead paragraph, supporting details, and conclusion). The teacher should remind students that these parts should be included in their own articles.

Extension Activity

Have students exchange their articles and analyze them. Students should check to see if they used all the parts of an article. They can also give suggestions for improvement.

Evaluation
