Scope of Document

This document is intended for use by experienced technicians familiar with Nucleus paging stations and Glenayre C2010 transmitter controller equipment. It contains information required for the equipment described.

This document is not intended to replace the system and equipment training offered by Motorola and Glenayre although it can be used to supplement or enhance the knowledge gained through such training.

Note: The WMtxp protocol is a superset of the standard ERMES I20 interface protocol.

- GL-C2010 (version 3.1 or later), Transmitter Controller User Manual, Glenayre part number 9110.00930

Introduction and Overview

The WMtxp protocol provides a physical and logical connection between a transmitter controller and the Nucleus paging station. The WMtxp protocol is comprised of two layers of information. The lowest layer, the data link layer, includes that functionality which is required to guarantee the delivery and integrity of the transmission of the data packets. This layer provides for a duplex, 9600 Baud transmission and reception of the packets. The second layer provides applications level information. This layer resides in the DATA field of the data packets and carries application bound information of messages.

The Nucleus paging station, when ordered with the WMtxp protocol option, arrives with a new SCM board (part number PTYN-4059C) and its matched Exciter. The SCM has a new load of software, version 4.1 or later, which supports many of the basic WMtxp command sets (originated in Europe) as described in Motorola's marketing literature (MPD) in addition to the Glenayre extended command set (now known as the WMtxp protocol).

Note: Read this entire procedure prior to beginning the configuration.
