- 1. The first step in the process of creating a new product is to identify a market need. This involves conducting market research to determine what consumers want and what problems they are trying to solve.
- 2. Once a market need has been identified, the next step is to develop a concept for a product that meets this need. This involves brainstorming ideas and selecting the most promising one.
- 3. The third step is to create a prototype of the product. This allows the designer to test the product and make any necessary adjustments before moving forward with production.
- 4. After the prototype has been created, the next step is to conduct a feasibility study. This involves evaluating the product's potential for success in the market, taking into account factors such as cost, competition, and distribution.
- 5. If the feasibility study is positive, the next step is to develop a business plan. This document outlines the company's goals, strategies, and financial projections, providing a roadmap for the product's development and launch.
- 6. The final step in the process is to launch the product. This involves marketing the product to the target audience, distributing it, and monitoring its performance in the market.

- Make sure employees are aware of the policy.
- Explain the benefits. (Using WELT® and how it fits in overall.)
- Make clear statements on company property, an employee should be required to use the Internet solely when the company has a business need.
- Check the frequency of monitoring and make the system again in the work computer. It is important again to be during the above procedure.
