1. Archaeology

What is Archaeology?

Archaeology is the study of human history through material remains such as tools, buildings, and bones. It helps us understand how people lived in the past.

Tools and Methods

- Site Discovery: Sites are found using aerial photography, old maps, legends, geophysical surveys, or accidental discoveries.
- Excavation Tools: Trowels, brushes, sieves, and photographic equipment.
- Dating Methods:
  - Carbon-14 Dating: This method measures the decay of carbon isotopes in organic material (like plants or animal remains) to determine their age. Over time, carbon-14 breaks down, and by measuring how much remains, scientists can estimate how old the object is.
  - Dendrochronology: This technique studies tree rings to determine a tree's age. Each year, trees produce a new ring, and by counting these rings, scientists can establish the exact age of the tree and even learn about past climate conditions.
  - Stratigraphy: This is the study of layers of soil (or strata) found in the ground. Older layers are usually found deeper in the soil, while newer layers are on top. By examining these layers, scientists can create a timeline of historical events and understand how they relate to each other.

Example Sites

- Newgrange: A prehistoric burial mound in Co. Meath.
  - Crannógs: Artificial islands used as dwellings in lakes.
