

EXERCISE 5

MOLECULAR BASIS OF HEREDITY

Reggie Y. Dela Cruz

I. INTRODUCTION

The structure and function of the cell is determined by the kind and amount of proteins it contains. The proteins synthesized by the cell are determined by the genes the organism has. Genes are composed of deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA). The DNA has the role of being the "blueprint" of the cell and ultimately the whole organism.

The central dogma of molecular biology explains how the DNA transmits information from generation to the next and how it encodes the information on the types of proteins to be synthesized by the cell. The DNA found in the nucleus has to be transcribed into messenger ribonucleic acid (mRNA) which goes to the cytoplasm and meets with the ribosome for translation process to occur. The final gene products are proteins or polypeptides.

II. OBJECTIVE

At the end of the exercise, the student should be able to illustrate through models the processes of replication, transcription and translation.

III. MATERIALS

Hard plastic folders (6 colors)
Tooth pick

1 pair of sharp scissors
Genetic code

IV. PROCEDURE

A. DNA Structure. The DNA is a double-stranded helix whose backbone is made up of deoxyribose sugar and phosphate. The two backbones are connected by several pairs of nitrogenous bases. The nitrogenous bases are grouped into purines and pyrimidines. Purines include adenine(A) and guanine(G) while pyrimidines include cytosine(C) and thymine(T). There is specific pairing of these four bases: A pairs only with T and C pairs only with G.

1. Construct a DNA model composed of 18 base pairs using colored plastic chips.
2. Designate a color and shape to each molecule in the DNA. The following are just suggestions. You can be more creative!

Red	= T
blue	= A
yellow	= C
green	= G

pink	=deoxyribose sugar
orange	= phosphate
