This book explores the changing dynamics and challenges behind the rapid expanse of Africa's urban population. Africa's urban age is underway. With the world's fastest growing urban population, the continent is rapidly transforming from one that is largely rural to one that is largely urban. Often facing limited budgets, those tasked with managing African cities require empirical evidence on the nature of demands for infrastructure, escalating environmental hazards, and ever-expanding informal settlements. Drawing on the work of the African Urban Research Initiative, this book brings together contributions from local researchers investigating key themes and challenges within their own contexts. An important example of urban knowledge co-production, the book demonstrates the regional diversity that can be seen as the main feature of African urbanism, with even well-accepted concepts such as informality manifesting in markedly different ways from place to place. Providing an important nuanced perspective on the heterogeneity of African cities and the challenges they face, this book will be an important resource for researchers across development studies, African studies, and urban studies. Bibliography [on Alaska Earthquakes] National Research Council (U.S.). Committee on the Alaska Earthquake, 1966 Uganda International Monetary Fund. Fiscal Affairs Dept., 2024-03-04. Uganda has committed to an ambitious climate change mitigation and adaptation agenda. To achieve this, the country has developed a sound framework to enhance climate change sensitivity across public financial and public investment management. The framework clearly allocates responsibilities, enhances coordination, and requires the identification of climate expenses in the budget documentation. However, gaps remain in some key regulations, primarily on project appraisal, and some initiatives are in early stages of implementation and need further guidance and training. The Climate Public Investment Management Assessment proposes reforms across multiple areas, underscoring as priority areas project appraisal and selection, and budgeting and portfolio management.

Mosello, 2015-03-03 As the evidence for human induced climate change becomes more obvious so too does the realisation that it will harshly impact on the natural environment as well as on socio economic systems Addressing the unpredictability of multiple sources of global change makes the capacity of governance systems to deal with uncertainty and surprise essential However how all these complex processes act in concert and under which conditions they lead to the sustainable governance of environmental resources are questions that have remained relatively unanswered This book aims at addressing this fundamental gap using as case examples the basins of the Po River in Northern Italy and the Syr Darya River in Kyrgyzstan The opening chapter addresses the challenges of governing water in times of climate and other changes Chapter Two reviews water governance through history and science The third chapter outlines a conceptual framework for studying institutional adaptive capacity The next two chapters offer detailed case studies of the Po and Syr Darya rivers followed by a chapter length analysis and comparison of adaptive water resources management in the two regions The discussion includes a description of resistant reactive and proactive institutions and puts forward ideas on how water governance regimes can transition from resistant to proactive The final chapter takes a high level view of lessons learned and how to transform these into policy recommendations and offers a perspective on embracing uncertainty and meeting future challenges Washington Public Documents Washington (State), 1965 NewsInsights , 2004 Fact Sheet , 1994
