Background

The Muscular System

The major function of the muscular system is movement - the voluntary movement, including: pumping the heart, contracting skeletal muscles to move the body, control of facial & neck expressions, etc. Muscles also create heat as they contract, helping to maintain a constant body temperature. Skeletal muscle (voluntary) mostly built of unbranched, striated body muscle. Each muscle is an individual organ made up of muscle tissue, nerves, blood vessels, and connective tissue. There are three types of muscle tissue: skeletal, cardiac, and smooth.

Skeletal Muscle

Skeletal muscle cells (myofibrils) are attached to bony structures.

Skeletal muscles contract voluntarily, meaning that you can control them.

Characteristics: skeletal muscle cells appear to be unbranched like epithelial cells.

striated, tapered, and multinucleated. Each skeletal muscle cell is attached to two bony ends (points) where they contract, they pull the attachment points closer to each other.

Myofibrils are made up of extremely tough collagen fibers in the form of parallel, repeating contractile units. They consist of skeletal muscle fibers, which are organized in sarcomeres. Sarcomeres are the basic units of contraction in muscle cells. They are the repeating units of the myofibril, and their function is to contract, relax, and generate and transmit force. The myofibril is the basic unit of contraction in muscle, and the myofibril is the basic unit of contraction in muscle. The myofibril is the basic unit of contraction in muscle, and the myofibril is the basic unit of contraction in muscle. Cardiac Muscle

Cardiac muscle is only found in the heart and is characterized by striations and branching. It is found throughout the heart, especially in the myocardium. Cardiac muscle is characterized by its branching, striated, and involuntary nature. It is found in the heart, and its function is to contract and relax, generating and transmitting force. The myofibril is the basic unit of contraction in muscle, and the myofibril is the basic unit of contraction in muscle. Smooth Muscle

Smooth muscle, also known as involuntary muscle, is the muscle of the internal organs and is found in the walls of the digestive tract, blood vessels, and other organs. It is characterized by its smooth, non-striated appearance and its involuntary nature. It is found in the heart, and its function is to contract and relax, generating and transmitting force.
