Mum, Can I Eat This?, 2018 When life gives you lemons make lemonade right Well what if you have an intolerance or allergy and can't have lemonade Or worse yet your child does When you are forced to watch your child go through the pain and suffering that comes with intolerances and allergies it rips your heart out To ease that pain and suffering in our family and to add a little normality and joy I took to the stove After all it's hard enough being a kid these days without missing out on the things you love and being distinguished as different After much trial and error I have created a degree of normality in my children's lives and it tastes amazing I have published this collection to share with everyone suffering from fructose gluten sucrose sugar IBS and lactose intolerances or allergies but most of all for the kids I would add though that if you or your child regularly suffer from abdominal discomfort see a specialist You may assume you have fructose or lactose intolerance for example but only a specialist can diagnose this and rule out anything more serious Although the wait might be long have courage and don't give up Several years ago my daughter Keira and later her sister Madison were diagnosed with intolerances It was so overwhelming There was a lack of credible information and certainly a lack of cookbooks that catered for children Sure there were a few FODMAP friendly books out there but certainly nothing that was catering for children Most of the recipes I did find my daughter would never eat and as for fun food that you would find at a party so that she could feel like everyone else well these recipes were even scarcer and usually had that not quite right earthy taste that we refer to in our house as a hippie food taste Keira wanted things to taste like the food she d had before she was diagnosed
