Computational Intelligence for Semantic Knowledge Management Giovanni Acampora,Witold Pedrycz,Athanasios V. Vasilakos,Autilia Vitiello,2019-07-11 This book provides a comprehensive overview of computational intelligence methods for semantic knowledge management Contrary to popular belief the methods for semantic management of information were created several decades ago long before the birth of the Internet In fact it was back in 1945 when Vannevar Bush introduced the idea for the first protohypertext the MEMEX MEMory indEX machine In the years that followed Bush s idea influenced the development of early hypertext systems until in the 1980s Tim Berners Lee developed the idea of the World Wide Web WWW as it is known today From then on there was an exponential growth in research and industrial activities related to the semantic management of the information and its exploitation in different application domains such as healthcare e learning and energy management However semantics methods are not yet able to address some of the problems that naturally characterize knowledge management such as the vagueness and uncertainty of information This book reveals how computational intelligence methodologies due to their natural inclination to deal with imprecision and partial truth are opening new positive scenarios for designing innovative semantic knowledge management architectures International Journal of Transmedia Literacy (IJTL) Vol 1, No 1 (2015) AA.
