QUESTION
A 60-year-old male with a 20-year history of type 2 diabetes mellitus presents with a 2-week history of increasing fatigue, weight loss, and decreased appetite. He reports that he has been unable to tolerate his usual diet and has lost approximately 10 pounds (4.5 kg) over the past few months. He has no recent changes in his medications and has been taking his insulin as prescribed. His medical history is significant for hypertension, hyperlipidemia, and chronic kidney disease (stage 3). He has no family history of diabetes or other endocrine disorders. Physical examination reveals a thin, elderly man with no acute abnormalities. Laboratory studies show a hemoglobin A1c of 8.5%, serum glucose of 180 mg/dL (10 mmol/L), and serum insulin of 0.5 µU/mL (5 mU/L). Which of the following is the most likely cause of his symptoms?

ANSWER
A. Hypothyroidism

EXPLANATION
The patient's symptoms of fatigue, weight loss, and decreased appetite, along with the laboratory findings of hyperglycemia and low insulin levels, are most consistent with type 1 diabetes mellitus. Type 1 diabetes is an autoimmune disease characterized by the destruction of pancreatic islet cells, leading to absolute insulin deficiency. The symptoms described are typical of the prodromal phase of the disease, which can occur at any age but is more common in younger individuals. The patient's long-standing type 2 diabetes mellitus and the fact that he has been taking insulin as prescribed make it unlikely that his symptoms are due to a change in his diabetes management. The other options are less likely: hypothyroidism typically causes weight gain and fatigue, but not the combination of symptoms and laboratory findings seen here; hyperthyroidism typically causes weight loss and increased appetite; and chronic kidney disease typically causes fatigue and weight loss, but not the hyperglycemia and low insulin levels.

QUESTION
A 60-year-old male with a 20-year history of type 2 diabetes mellitus presents with a 2-week history of increasing fatigue, weight loss, and decreased appetite. He reports frequent urination and increased thirst. His medical history is significant for hypertension, hyperlipidemia, and chronic kidney disease (stage 3). He is currently taking metformin, lisinopril, and atorvastatin. Physical examination reveals dry mucous membranes, tachycardia, and mild dehydration. Laboratory studies show hemoglobin A1c of 10.5%, serum glucose of 250 mg/dL, and serum bicarbonate of 18 mEq/L. Urinalysis shows glucose 3+ and ketones 2+. What is the most appropriate initial management?

ANSWER
Initiate intravenous insulin therapy and fluid resuscitation.

EXPLANATION
The patient's symptoms and laboratory findings are consistent with diabetic ketoacidosis (DKA). The initial management should focus on stabilizing the patient, including fluid resuscitation to correct dehydration and initiate intravenous insulin therapy to lower blood glucose and resolve ketosis. Other options such as oral insulin, subcutaneous insulin, or oral fluids are not appropriate in this acute setting.

1. Identify the problem. The first step is to identify the problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This involves gathering information and understanding the context of the problem.

2. Analyze the problem. Once the problem is identified, the next step is to analyze it. This involves breaking down the problem into smaller, more manageable parts and identifying the causes and effects.

3. Develop a plan. After analyzing the problem, the next step is to develop a plan. This involves identifying the goals and objectives of the project and determining the steps that need to be taken to achieve them.

4. Implement the plan. Once a plan has been developed, the next step is to implement it. This involves putting the plan into action and monitoring progress.

5. Evaluate the results. The final step is to evaluate the results of the project. This involves comparing the actual results to the goals and objectives and determining whether the project was successful.

Abstract
The purpose of this study was to investigate the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of elderly people. The study was conducted in a community center in Tehran, Iran. The participants were 30 elderly people (mean age = 70.5 years) who were randomly divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The experimental group participated in a 12-week training program that included aerobic exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not participate in any training program. The physical health of the participants was assessed using a series of tests, including a 6-minute walk test, a 30-second chair stand test, and a handgrip strength test. The psychological health of the participants was assessed using a series of questionnaires, including the Geriatric Depression Scale (GDS), the Geriatric Anxiety Inventory (GAI), and the Geriatric Symptom Scale (GSS). The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly better physical and psychological health than the control group after 12 weeks of training. The 6-minute walk test results showed that the experimental group had a significantly higher distance walked than the control group. The 30-second chair stand test results showed that the experimental group had a significantly higher number of stands than the control group. The handgrip strength test results showed that the experimental group had a significantly higher handgrip strength than the control group. The GDS results showed that the experimental group had a significantly lower score than the control group, indicating a lower level of depression. The GAI results showed that the experimental group had a significantly lower score than the control group, indicating a lower level of anxiety. The GSS results showed that the experimental group had a significantly lower score than the control group, indicating a lower level of symptoms. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical and psychological health of elderly people.

QUESTION
A 60-year-old male with a 20-year history of type 2 diabetes mellitus presents with a 2-week history of increasing fatigue, weight loss, and decreased appetite. He reports frequent urination and increased thirst. Physical examination reveals a BMI of 28 kg/m², tachycardia, and dry mucous membranes. Laboratory studies show a hemoglobin A1c of 10.5%, serum glucose of 250 mg/dL, and serum ketones of 2+.

ANSWER
Type 2 diabetes mellitus with hyperglycemic hyperosmolar state (HHS).

EXPLANATION
The patient's symptoms and physical findings are consistent with hyperglycemia. The presence of ketones in the urine suggests that the patient may have developed a diabetic ketoacidosis (DKA) or a hyperglycemic hyperosmolar state (HHS). The patient's history of type 2 diabetes mellitus and the absence of ketonuria in the past suggest that HHS is the most likely diagnosis. The patient's symptoms and physical findings are consistent with HHS, which is a medical emergency characterized by severe hyperglycemia, hyperosmolality, and dehydration.

QUESTION

1. A patient with a history of chronic kidney disease (CKD) is being treated with a diuretic. The patient's serum potassium level is 2.8 mEq/L. The nurse should monitor the patient for which of the following signs and symptoms?

ANSWER

1. Muscle weakness and numbness

RATIONALE

1. Muscle weakness and numbness are signs of hypokalemia, which is a common complication of diuretic therapy in patients with CKD. The nurse should monitor the patient for these signs and symptoms and report them to the healthcare provider.

2. Increased thirst and dry mouth are signs of dehydration, which is a common complication of diuretic therapy. The nurse should monitor the patient for these signs and symptoms and encourage the patient to drink plenty of fluids.

3. Increased urination and decreased urine output are signs of renal impairment, which is a common complication of CKD. The nurse should monitor the patient for these signs and symptoms and report them to the healthcare provider.

4. Increased blood pressure and decreased blood pressure are signs of hypertension and hypotension, which are common complications of CKD. The nurse should monitor the patient for these signs and symptoms and report them to the healthcare provider.
