2. Method

2.1. Participants

20 participants were recruited from a local university and were assigned to two groups.

10 participants were assigned to the control group and 10 participants to the experimental group.

The participants were all students of the university and were not paid for their participation.

The study was approved by the ethics committee of the university.

2.2. Procedure

The participants were familiarized with the system before the experiment.

The experiment was conducted in a controlled environment with a sample of 20 participants.

The participants were assigned to two groups: control and experimental.

The control group used the traditional system and the experimental group used the proposed system.

The performance of the participants was measured using a set of tasks.

The results of the study show that the proposed system significantly improved the performance of the participants compared to the control group. The improvement was statistically significant and was observed across all tasks.

The study concludes that the proposed system is a promising solution for improving the performance of the participants.

Future research should focus on the long-term effects of the proposed system and its applicability in real-world scenarios.

The authors thank the participants and the ethics committee for their contribution to the study.

The authors also thank the funding agency for their support of the study.

The authors declare that they have no conflict of interest.
