Napoleon III (Emperor of the French)

Louis Napoleacutleon Le Grand Litteacuterature:

Napoleon the Little Victor Hugo, 2008-12 Hugo's Napoleon the Little is a satirical comparison of Napoleon I and II published in 1852. Earlier was monument of leadership while latter a complete failure. During his reign France went to an edge of ruin. This conscience shaking work with references from other sources is illuminating for readers of all times.

Napoleon the Little Victor Hugo, 2020-03-30 On Thursday December 20 1848 the Constituent Assembly being in session surrounded at that moment by an imposing display of troops heard the report of the Representative Waldeck Rousseau read on behalf of the committee which had been appointed to scrutinize the votes in the election of President of the Republic a report in which general attention had marked this phrase which embodied its whole idea It is the seal of its inviolable authority which the nation by this admirable application of the fundamental law itself affixes on the Constitution to render it sacred and inviolable. Amid the profound silence of the nine hundred representatives of whom almost the entire number was assembled the President of the National Constituent Assembly Armand Marrast rose and said In the name of the French people Whereas Citizen Charles Louis Napoleon Bonaparte born at Paris fulfils the conditions of eligibility prescribed by Article 44 of the Constitution Those who as representatives of the people received in trust for the people the oath of the 20th of December 1848 those especially who being twice invested with the confidence of the nation had as representatives heard that oath sworn and as legislators had seen it violated had assumed with their writ of summons two duties The first of these was on the day when that oath should be violated to rise in their places to present their breasts to the enemy without calculating either his numbers or his strength to shelter with their bodies the sovereignty of the people and as a means to combat and cast down the usurper to grasp every sort of weapon from the law found in the code to the paving stone that one picks up in the street The second duty was after having accepted the combat and all its chances to accept proscription and all its miseries to stand eternally erect before the traitor his oath in their hands to forget their personal sufferings their private sorrows their families dispersed and maltreated their fortunes destroyed their affections crushed their bleeding hearts to forget themselves and to feel thenceforth but a single wound the wound of France to cry aloud for justice never to suffer themselves to be appeased never to relent but to be implacable to seize the despicable perjurer crowned though he were if not with the hand of the law at least with the pincers of truth and to heat red hot in the fire of history all the letters of his oath and brand them on his face He who writes these lines is one of those who did not shrink on the 2nd of December from the utmost effort to accomplish the first of these two great duties in publishing this book he performs the second
