

The primary and secondary sensors are powered and read by the traction controller. For schematics of the MONOTROL pedal direction control and its outputs see the Diagrams and Schematics section.

Some vehicles will offer an optional steer column mounted shift lever and an accelerator pedal. The accelerator pedal angle sensor is identical to the MONOTROL. The Shift lever is comprised of two switches and a resistor network used to replicate the analog direction sensor of the MONOTROL pedal detailed above. For more information see the Diagrams and Schematics section.

Service Brake Switch

A mechanical switch located on the service brake pedal assembly is activated when the brake pedal is depressed. This switch is used to activate the brake lights and cause the motor to regenerate brake the truck, assisting the mechanical system during braking. The brake switch input is read by the traction controller. For schematics of the brake switch see Diagrams and Schematics section.

Seat Switch (Optional)

The traction control system offers operator detection to prevent operation unless the operator is in the seat. An optional switch is provided in the seat which will detect when the operator is present. If not installed, the wiring is connected together to bypass the seat interlock features. For schematics of the seat switch see Diagrams and Schematics section.

Hydraulic Inputs

All function levers actuate a manual hydraulic valve via a direct mechanical link.

The lift function lever angle is determined by a single, analog rotary position sensor. As the lever is pulled increasingly towards the operator, the pump motor speed will also proportionally increasing speed.

Operation of the tilt function lever is determined by a normally open switch. When the lever is pushed or pulled the switch is closed, activating the tilt function. As the lever is pulled towards the operator, the forks will also tilt back. As the lever is pushed away from the operator, the forks will also tilt forward.

Two optional attachment levers are offered, each function lever is determined by a normally open switch. When the lever is pushed or pulled the switch is closed, activating the function.

Steering Wheel Speed

The steering wheel contains a two channel electronic encoder which detects movement in the steering wheel.

Internal to the encoder are two electronic switches alternately shorting the signal to B- as the steering wheel is turned.

Pull up resistors to 12V are provided in the harness which combined with the encoder provide a pulsing 12V signal read in by the hydraulic control.

This pulsing 12V signal is proportional to the steering wheel speed.

Contactors

NOTE: Do not use a file on the contacts.

NOTE: Do not lubricate the contacts.

There can be two contactors on these lift trucks, a power steering contactor and a line contactor. The contacts in a contactor are made of special silver alloy. The contacts will look black and rough from normal operation. This condition does not cause problems with the operation of the lift truck. Cleaning is not necessary.
