Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of risk factors for low back pain between two groups of nurses. One group consisted of nurses who had been employed by their current employer for less than five years and the other group consisted of nurses who had been employed by their current employer for five or more years. Data were collected from a questionnaire sent to all registered nurses in the state of Michigan. The results showed that the prevalence of risk factors for low back pain was higher among nurses who had been employed by their current employer for less than five years compared to those who had been employed for five or more years.
