

I. First Night

This was the time of day when I wished I were able to sleep.

High school.

Or was purgatory the right word? If there was any way to atone for my sins, this might be counted toward the tally in some manner. The medium was not something I grew used to, every day seemed more temporarily uncomfortable than the last.

I suppose this was my form of sleep—if sleep was defined as the worst state between active waking.

I stared at the cracks running through the plaster in the far corner of the cafeteria, imagining patterns into them that were not there. It was one way to time out the visions that belted like the gust of a river inside my head.

Several hundred of those visions I ignored out of boredom.

When it came to the human mind, I'd heard it all before and then some. Today, all thoughts were consumed with the trivial drama of a new addition to the small student body here. It took so little to work them all up. I'd seen the new face repeated in thought after thought from every angle. Just an ordinary human girl. The excitement over her arrival was tremendously predictable—like flashing a shiny object at a child. Half the sleep-like males were already imagining themselves in love with her, just because she was something new to look at. I tried harder to force them out.

Only four visions did I block out of courtesy rather than distaste: my family, my two brothers and two sisters, who were so used to the lack of privacy in my presence that they rarely gave it a thought. I gave them what privacy I could. I tried not to listen if I could help it.

Try as I may, still...I know.

Rosalie was thinking, as usual, about herself. She'd caught sight of her profile in the reflection off someone's glasses, and she was mulling over her own perfection. Rosalie's mind was a shallow pool with few surprises.

Harmon was fuming over a wrestling match he'd lost to Jasper during the night. It would take all his limited patience to make it to the end of the school day to orchestrate a rematch. I never really felt intrusive hearing Harmon's thoughts, because he never thought one thing that he would put any stock or put into action. Perhaps I only felt guilty reading the others' minds because I knew there were things there that they wouldn't want me to know. If Rosalie's mind was a shallow pool, then Harmon's was a lake with no shorelines, glass clear.

And Jasper was...suffering. I suppressed a sigh.

Edward. Alice called my name in her head, and had my attention at once.

It was just the same as having my name called aloud. I was glad my given name had fallen out of style lately—it had been annoying, anytime anyone thought of my Edward, my head would turn automatically.

My head didn't turn now. Alice and I were good at these private conversations. It was rare that anyone caught us. I kept my eyes on the lines in the plaster.

How is he holding up? she asked me.

Midnight Sun Chapter 1:

The Autumn Of My Time Richard Talbot, 2016-02-12 The Autumn of My Time is an autobiography of my life and my family. The narrative sweeps across a century and a half of Americana and documents the trials and tribulations of a growing American family through the days of the Civil War, World Wars I and II, The Korean War, and the Vietnam conflict. It tells the story of gentler times when families lived and worked in adjoining towns. Cousins actually knew each other and went to the same school and played together on weekends. When radio was in its infancy, automobiles had rumble seats, TV was a fantasy, and neighbors knew and helped each other. It spans the gap from World War I through Hitler's invasion of Poland and Japan's cowardly attack on Pearl Harbor at the start of World War II and the dropping of the atomic bombs on Nagasaki and Hiroshima. My story goes on to describe how I received a direct commission and became an officer pilot. How I nearly flew for Air America in the Far East, flew in Iceland and in Alaska, and then joined the First Cavalry Division to serve two tours of combat in Vietnam. I tell you how I received a college degree in only one year just before I left the service for retirement and a new life as a civilian. My narrative tells you how I became a professional racquetball player and a racquetball club owner, won nine national racquetball championships, was the general manager of three retirement and recreational communities, raised a family, wrote two books, and now in here in The Autumn of My Time document for you the story of my life.
