Leap Writing Scoring Guide:

A Rhetoric of Reflection Kathleen Yancey, 2016-08-15 Reflection in writing studies is now entering a third generation. Dating from the 1970s the first generation of reflection focused on identifying and describing internal cognitive processes assumed to be part of composing. The second generation operating in both classroom and assessment scenes in the 1990s developed mechanisms for externalizing reflection making it visible and thus explicitly available to help writers. Now a third generation of work in reflection is emerging. As mapped by the contributors to A Rhetoric of Reflection this iteration of research and practice is taking up new questions in new sites of activity and with new theories. It comprises attention to transfer of writing knowledge and practice teaching and assessment portfolios linguistic and cultural difference and various media including print and digital. It conceptualizes conversation as a primary reflective medium both inside and outside the classroom and for individuals and collectives and articulates the role that different genres play in hosting reflection. Perhaps most important in the work of this third generation is the identification and increasing appreciation of the epistemic value of reflection of its ability to help make new meanings and of its rhetorical power for both scholars and students. Assessing and Improving Student Writing in College Barbara E. Walvoord, 2014-07-07 Step by step guidance for shaping better writers while keeping faculty workloads manageable. Effective communication is a critical skill for many academic disciplines and careers and so colleges and universities and their faculty members are rightfully committed to improving student writing across the curriculum. Guiding and assessing student writing in classrooms, general education and departments takes knowledge, planning and persistence but it can be done effectively and efficiently. Written in the concise, accessible style Barbara Walvoord is known for, Assessing and Improving Student Writing in College: A Guide for Institutions, General Education Departments and Classrooms offers administrators, program chairs, general education leaders and classroom instructors the guidance they need. The book provides concrete suggestions for how to articulate goals for student writing, measure student writing, improve student writing, document that improvement. The book begins by addressing four basic concepts: what we mean by writing, what we mean by good writing, how students learn to write and the purposes of assessment. Next Walvoord explains the various approaches and methods for assessing writing, urging a combination of them adapted to the institution's purposes and political context. After this introduction, successive chapters offer realistic, practical advice to institution-wide and general education leaders, department members and classroom instructors. Walvoord addresses issues such as how to engage faculty, how to use rubrics, how to aggregate assessment information at the department and institutional levels and how to report assessment information to accreditors. The chapter for classroom instructors offers practical suggestions: how to add more writing to a course without substantially increasing the grading load, how to construct writing assignments how to make grading and responding more effective and time efficient how to address grammar and punctuation and how to support students whose native language is not English The book also includes four helpful appendices a taxonomy of Writing Across the Curriculum WAC and Writing in the Disciplines WID programs sample outlines for faculty development workshops a student survey on teaching methods instructors can use to inform their choices in the classroom and a student self check cover sheet designed to help students take ownership of their own learning and responsibility for turning in complete correct assignments Practical step by step guidance for each point in the assessment and improvement process creates a cohesive institution wide system that keeps students faculty and administrators on the same page

Grading Students' Classroom Writing: Issues and Strategies Bruce W. Speck, 2000-06-26 This book offers detailed and complex guidance and the necessary techniques for grading college students writing It examines why it is important to integrate grading into the writing process the need for effective writing assignments ensuring fair professorial judgments promoting student learning helping students learn how to respond effectively to writing and administrative support for effective grading Sections of the book cover the writing process and grading students writing fitting evaluation with the writing process marrying writing and grading constructing writing assignments determining purpose and audience critiquing writing assignment fairness and professional judgment grading methods including students in the assessment of writing professorial authorities cheating preparing students to make informed decisions about writing quality and providing feedback for revision reading and responding to students writing common misperceptions about feedback A final section recommendations that faculty 1 tailor the writing and grading process to particular classroom situations 2 use writing to help students learn 3 not grade all writing 4 make wise use of time required for the writing and grading process and 5 integrate literature on grading into their professional reading An appendix offers an example of a student paper with effective written comments Contains approximately 200 references CH
