Leica Geosystems Manual:

Mergent International Manual, 2009 Leica GPS1200, 2008 Surveying for Civil and Mine Engineers John Walker, Joseph L. Awange, 2017-08-04

Indeed the most important part of engineering work and also of other scientific work is the determination of the method of attacking the problem whatever it may be whether an experimental investigation or a theoretical calculation. It is by the choice of a suitable method of attack that intricate problems are reduced to simple phenomena and then easily solved. Charles Proteus Steinmetz

The structure of this book is to provide a sequence of theory workshops and practical field sessions that mimic a simple survey project designed for civil and mining engineers. The format of the book is based on a number of years of experience gained in presenting the course at undergraduate and post graduate levels. The course is designed to guide engineers through survey tasks that the engineering industry feels is necessary for them to have a demonstrated competency in surveying techniques: data gathering and reduction and report presentation. The course is not designed to make engineers become surveyors. It is designed to allow an appreciation of the civil and mine engineering surveyor's job. There are many excellent text books available on the subject of engineering surveying but they address the surveyor not the engineer. Hopefully this book will distil many parts of the standard text book. A lot of the material presented is scattered through very disparate sources and has been gathered into this book to show what techniques lie behind a surveyor's repertoire of observational and computational skills and provide an understanding of the decisions made in terms of the presentation of results. The course has been designed to run over about 6 weeks of a semester providing a half unit load which complements a computer aided design CAD based design project.

Remote Sensing in Archaeology James R. Wiseman, Farouk El-Baz, 2007-06-04

Over the last few decades a revolution took place in our ability to observe and explore our home planet using spaceborne and airborne remote sensing instruments. This revolution resulted from the new capability of observing on a large regional and global scale surface patterns and features and from using multispectral instruments to observe surface signatures not visible to the human eye and to penetrate below the surface cover using microwave radiation. Over the last decade this new technology is being brought to bear in the field of archaeology. As nicely and comprehensively described in this book, remote sensing techniques are bringing new powerful tools to help archaeologists in their quest of discovery and exploration. Even though this field is still in its infancy, the different articles in this book give us a glimpse of the things to come and the great potential of remote sensing in archaeology. The editors have brought an excellent sampling of authors that illustrate how remote sensing techniques are being used in the real world of archaeological exploration. A number of chapters illustrate how spaceborne and airborne remote sensing instruments are being used to decipher surface morphological features in arid Egypt, Arabia, semi arid Greece, Ethiopia, Italy, as well as tropical regions, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Cambodia, to help in archaeological and paleontological exploration. They illustrate the use of surface cover penetration with radars, high resolution multispectral imaging on a regional basis as well as topographic
