SKELETAL AND MUSCULAR SYSTEMS

Dr. Christopher

SKELETAL SYSTEM

The skeletal system is composed of bones, ligaments, and joints. It provides structural support, protects internal organs, stores minerals, and facilitates movement. The skeleton is divided into the axial skeleton (skull, spine, and rib cage) and the appendicular skeleton (arms and legs). Bones are made of living tissue and are constantly remodeling themselves. The skeletal system also stores fat and produces blood cells in the bone marrow. Ligaments connect bones to each other, and joints allow for movement. The skeletal system is essential for the body's overall structure and function.

The human skeleton is made of 206 bones. The skull is made of 22 bones, the spine of 26, and the rib cage of 24. The arms and legs are made of 32 bones each. The skeleton is made of two types of bones: long bones and short bones. Long bones are found in the arms and legs, and short bones are found in the wrist and ankle. The skeleton is also made of cartilage, which is a flexible tissue that connects bones to each other. The skeleton is constantly remodeling itself, with old bone being replaced by new bone. This process is called bone turnover.
