

2. For the table below, a couple of values are given for an arithmetic sequence and a geometric sequence.

- Identify the initial value for both the arithmetic sequence and the geometric sequence.
- Identify the common difference for the arithmetic sequence and the common ratio for the geometric sequence.
- Complete the table.

n	Arithmetic sequence: $f(n)$	Geometric sequence: $g(n)$
1	$f(1) = 5$	$g(1) = 5$
2	$f(2) = 14$	$g(2) = 1.2$
3	$f(3) = 24$	$g(3) = 24$
4	$f(4) = 33$	$g(4) = 4.8$
5	$f(5) = 42$	$g(5) = 58$
6	$f(6) = 51$	$g(6) = 1.92$
	Initial value: 5	Initial value: 5
	Common difference: 9	Common ratio: 2

3. Model a geometric sequence with a positive initial value and the common ratio being a fraction between zero and one eventually be greater than or less than an arithmetic sequence with a positive initial value and a negative common ratio? Explain your thinking.

Explanation will vary.

If students use examples, they may determine that the exponential sequence could initially decrease as a factor ratio than the arithmetic sequence. They should recognize and refer to the fact if decrease for the geometric sequence will "slow" while the arithmetic sequence will remain constant or the "same". They should bring up the idea that the values in the geometric sequence will remain positive, while the arithmetic sequence eventually have negative values and thus the geometric sequence will eventually be greater than the arithmetic sequence.
