programs undertaken after WWII have often been criticized as experiments that created more social problems than they solved. The neighborhoods of Ina Casa stand out in contrast to their contemporaries both in terms of design and outcome. Unlike modernist high rise housing projects of the period, Ina Casa neighborhoods are picturesque and human scaled and incorporate local construction materials and methods resulting in a rich aesthetic diversity. And unlike many other government forays into housing undertaken during this period, the Ina Casa plan was on the whole successful: the neighborhoods are still lively and cohesive communities today. This book examines what made Ina Casa a success among so many failed housing experiments, focusing on the tenuous balance struck between the legislation governing Ina Casa, the architects who led the Ina Casa administration, the theory of design that guided architects working on the plan, and an analysis of the results: the neighborhoods and homes constructed. Drawing on the writings of the architects, government documents, and including brief passages from works of neorealist literature and descriptions of neorealist films by Pier Paolo Pasolini, Italo Calvino, and others, this book presents a portrait of the postwar struggle to define a post-Fascist Italy.

The new form of timber construction is hybrid. Timber construction is booming not only because it is environmentally friendly; building in timber is gaining increasing importance, particularly in an urban and multistorey setting. Material optimized hybrid construction makes it possible to leave stereotyped thinking behind while opening up completely new opportunities for timber architecture. The completely revised and extended edition of this manual conveys essential knowledge about the system and methodology of timber construction from design and prefabrication to assembly on site. It creates a mutual understanding of all parties involved in the project required for collaboration in the integral planning and building process. It furthermore provides the technical competence needed for a convincing representation of modern timber construction.      *Michigan Administrative Code, 1954, ...
