Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were 15 men, 40-50 years old, who had been sedentary for at least 1 year. They were randomly assigned to a 12-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of 3 sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes, at a heart rate of 150-160 beats per minute. The control group remained sedentary. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during a submaximal exercise test at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the training program significantly increased the HR and HRR of the subjects. The HR at rest increased from 68 to 72 beats per minute, and the HRR increased from 22 to 26 beats per minute. The HR during the submaximal exercise test increased from 150 to 155 beats per minute, and the HRR increased from 28 to 32 beats per minute. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.
