Last Curtsey The End Of The Debutantes English Edition:

Last Curtsey Fiona MacCarthy, 2006 In 1958 the year in which Krushchev came to power in Russia the year after Eden's resignation over Suez two years after John Osborne's Look Back in Anger the last of the debutantes myself among them went to the Palace to curtsey to the Queen MacCarthy and her fellow debs or gels were taking part in a remarkable remnant of the rituals of aristocratic power The system had been in operation almost unchanged since the 18th century It was a female rite of passage an elaborate initiation ceremony marking the emergence of the virgin out of the schoolroom and into society at the now marriageable age of seventeen With their imitation grown up laughter and affectation of knowingness the girls were somewhere between teenagers and clones of the Queen herself Nigel Dempster gossip columnist and debs delight made estimates on the virginity level of the debutantes MacCarthy remembers party seasons that stretched for months among the great houses of London and the Home Counties and riotous dances on country estates in Northumberland and the Scottish Highlands Last Curtsey is a remarkable portrait of England in the past half century filtered through some of its most colourful and eccentric inhabitants

The Lost Mansions of Mayfair Oliver Bradbury, 2008 Internationally renowned Mayfair is comprised principally of the important estates of the Grosvenors and Berkeleys It has always been an area where the affluent resided This work is the first to catalogue in detail the architectural losses of this area It provides detailed descriptions in text photographs and drawings building on the work of the Survey of London in providing such a record Though describing the losses it also contains an appendix of the best of the survivors for the reader to see in Mayfair or in nearby Marylebone Owners key artisans and of course architects are listed Fully indexed Raymond Carr María Jesús González Hernández, 2013 Published in collaboration with the Canada Blanch Centre for Contemporary Spanish Studies

Country Life, 2006 The British National Bibliography Arthur James Wells, 2006 British Humanities Index, 2006 Last Curtsey the End of the Debutante Fion MacCarthy, 2006-12-07 Filtered through some of its colourful and eccentric inhabitants from Lady Caroline Lamb in the 18th century to Princess Diana in the 20th this work is a portrait of Britain as both empire and the customs and certainties of the old order came to an end International Who's Who of Authors and Writers 2008 Europa Publications, 2007-08-23 An invaluable source of information on the personalities and organizations of the literary world The Book Review Digest, 2007 The Homestead, 1926 The Bulletin, 1973-04

The Reign of Elizabeth II Louis Albert Nickolls, 1952 Winter Sea Alan Ross, 1997 As a very young naval officer at the end of World War II Alan Ross had the job with a handful of even younger marines of delivering a surrendered German U boat into Russian hands in Tallinn The German crew were inevitably reluctant to submit to this order but Ross prevailed and he saved their lives Almost half a century later he goes back to Tallinn to complete a strange friendship that had in the interim developed with the U boat commander The Australian Sugar Journal, 1934 City Unique William Weintraub, 1996 Montreal in the 1940s and 50s was Canada's largest richest most vibrant and colourful city It was at the end of those prosperous decades bursting at the seams still growing still far ahead of Toronto No one then could foresee the rise of Quebec separatism which would cripple the city and send it into its long decline In City Unique William Weintraub introduces the reader to many of the extraordinary characters who gave Montreal its singular flavour They include Camillien Houde the mayor who was interned during the war for advocating treason Lili St Cyr the ultimate striptease artiste who mesmerized men and boys Maurice Duplessis the dictatorial premier who could evict individuals from their homes if he suspected they were communist Harry Ship the czar of illegal gambling dens and Anna Beauchamp the flamboyant madam who operated a string of at least a dozen brothels Montreal was a wide open town the vice capital of Canada where the amply bribed police and politicians connived to resist all attempts at reform But two crusaders Pacifique Plante and Jean Drapeau were determined to clean up the city and Weintraub gives a lively account of their battle with the vice lords During the era far reaching changes took place within the communities that comprised Montreal's three solitudes the English the French and the Jewish and the author examines their effects He also describes the city's passionate ideologues both communist and fascist their struggles and changing fortunes in the aftermath of the Second World War He examines too the emergence of a generation of novelists playwrights and poets including Hugh MacLennan Gabrielle Roy Irving Layton and others who set a new standard for Canadian literature The 1940s and 50s were a unique period different from everything that came before the Great Depression the lingering stuffiness of the Edwardian era and different from the period that followed signaled by Quebec's Quiet Revolution It was a pivotal momentous time William Weintraub writing with indignation and affection brings the Montreal of his youth vividly entertainingly and wittily to life in this extraordinary book The Girl's Own Annual, 1896 Some volumes also include extra numbers The Aristocrats Roy Perrott, 1968 Newsweek, 1957 New Society, 1979 Elizabeth R. Patrick Lichfield, 1991
