Design of Experiments Approach for Implementation and Calibration of an OBD-II Compliant EGR Monitor Using a Transient Diesel Engine Test Cell Adam D. Wise, 2001      Language Acquisition in Diverse Linguistic, Social and Cognitive Circumstances Maria Garraffa, Maria Teresa Guasti, Theodoros Marinis, Gary Morgan, 2019-01-24

The language experience of children developing in linguistically diverse environments is subject to considerable variation both in terms of quantity and quality of language exposure. It is an open question how to investigate language exposure patterns and more important which factors are relevant for successful language learning. For example, children acquiring a minority language including a signed language are exposed to less variety of input than children acquiring a more global language. This is because they are living in a smaller linguistic community and with fewer occasions to use the language in everyday life. Despite this reduced input, most native signers are successful language learners. In contrast, native language competence is not always achieved in signing deaf children with hearing parents or those with cochlear implants learning a spoken language. A similar outcome but with very different reasons has also been reported for hearing children with language impairment. In these populations, acquisition of morphosyntactic aspects is developing atypically, ending with an incomplete linguistic repertoire. The circumstances of exposure during language development tend to differ in significant ways with respect to a large number of factors such as i) length, quality and quantity of input; ii) social status and attitudes toward the language; iii) cognitive abilities required for language learning; and iv) age of first exposure. Having early exposure to a range of different speakers is important in the acquisition of any language and may affect language proficiency. However, negative societal attitudes or a cognitive-based disadvantage may create an unfavourable learning environment that prevents language learning from surfacing typically. This situation inevitably generates a different type of exposure for the child and consequently different language competence. In this Research Topic, we intend to encourage the debate on social, linguistic and cognitive factors at play for designing an effective environment for language acquisition, aiming at integrating linguistic variables coming from theoretical studies on language with environmental variables such as measures of language input or cognitive abilities on functions ancillary to language development.
