Cell Cycle	Prokaryotes	Eukaryotes	Eukaryotes
The cell cycle is the process by which a cell grows and divides into two daughter cells. It is a fundamental process in all living organisms. The cell cycle is divided into two main phases: interphase and mitosis. Interphase is the period of cell growth and DNA replication, while mitosis is the process of cell division. The cell cycle is regulated by a complex system of proteins and enzymes, known as the cell cycle clock. The cell cycle clock is composed of a series of checkpoints that ensure the cell is ready to divide. The cell cycle clock is also influenced by external factors, such as growth factors and hormones. The cell cycle is a highly coordinated process that ensures the growth and development of an organism. The cell cycle is also involved in tissue repair and regeneration. The cell cycle is a fundamental process in all living organisms, and it is essential for the survival of the organism.
