Doing Museology Differently Duncan Grewcock, 2013-09-05 One might believe that museum studies is a stable field of academic inquiry based on a set of familiar institutional forms and functions But as institutions museums have never been stable or singular and neither has the discipline of museum studies Museum studies as a field of academic inquiry has received little critical attention One result of this neglect has arguably been a lack of invention in museum studies another is the distancing of academic museum studies from museum practice Doing Museology Differently charts a different course A critical creative reflection on academic practice the book takes the form of a narrative account of museological fieldwork A research story unfolds challenging academic conventions at the level of its own presentation the book combines critical museum visiting with an autobiographical voice The identification of a previously underexplored interdisciplinary space leads the author to experiment with museum studies using contemporary developments in the theory and practice of human geography. The new approaches to museological research and representation that emerge from this unique inquiry challenge assumed institutional and intellectual boundaries and act as a call to further creative experimentation.

This chapter explains the role of strategic planning when an institution is going through the process of hiring a new director. A question we are frequently asked is: Should the strategic plan precede the search process or should it wait until the new director takes up the position? Institutional change. Increasingly, cultural organizations are going through major change from public sector agencies to nonprofit corporations, from private ownership to nonprofit status, from nonprofit status to a foundation, and many other variations. This book addresses the role of strategic planning during these transitions. Staff empowerment.
