In 1941 a new term was added to the Oxford English Dictionary: Information Explosion. Press 2013. The term explains the growth in information content seen seven decades ago, beginning with Fremont Rider, a university librarian who in 1944 estimated that information in university libraries would double in size every sixteen years. Nearly seventy years later, Bounie and Gilled produced a report called International Production and Dissemination of Information and concluded that the world in 2008 produced 14.7 exabytes of new information, three times the amount of information produced just five years earlier. Press 2013. This rapid growth in information content has generated a greater need for organizations to evaluate how key organizational content is managed to achieve strategic goals and to remain competitive in today's business environment.
