Sciences and Education, Committee on Population, Committee on the Long-Run Macroeconomic Effects of the Aging U.S. Population--Phase II, 2015-09-17 The U S population is aging Social Security projections suggest that between 2013 and 2050 the population aged 65 and over will almost double from 45 million to 86 million One key driver of population aging is ongoing increases in life expectancy Average U S life expectancy was 67 years for males and 73 years for females five decades ago the averages are now 76 and 81 respectively It has long been the case that better educated higher income people enjoy longer life expectancies than less educated lower income people The causes include early life conditions behavioral factors such as nutrition exercise and smoking behaviors stress and access to health care services all of which can vary across education and income Our major entitlement programs Medicare Medicaid Social Security and Supplemental Security Income have come to deliver disproportionately larger lifetime benefits to higher income people because on average they are increasingly collecting those benefits over more years than others This report studies the impact the growing gap in life expectancy has on the present value of lifetime benefits that people with higher or lower earnings will receive from major entitlement programs The analysis presented in The Growing Gap in Life Expectancy by Income goes beyond an examination of the existing literature by providing the first comprehensive estimates of how lifetime benefits are affected by the changing distribution of life expectancy The report also explores from a lifetime benefit perspective how the growing gap in longevity affects traditional policy analyses of reforms to the nation's leading entitlement programs This in depth analysis of the economic impacts of the longevity gap will inform debate and assist decision makers economists and researchers
