Scientists in the Classroom J. Rudolph, 2002-05-02 During the 1950s leading American scientists embarked on an unprecedented project to remake high school science education Dissatisfaction with the soft school curriculum of the time advocated by the professional education establishment and concern over the growing technological sophistication of the Soviet Union led government officials to encourage a handful of elite research scientists fresh from their World War II successes to revitalize the nation's science curricula In Scientists in the Classroom John L Rudolph argues that the Cold War environment long neglected in the history of education literature is crucial to understanding both the reasons for the public acceptance of scientific authority in the field of education and the nature of the curriculum materials that were eventually produced Drawing on a wealth of previously untapped resources from government and university archives Rudolph focuses on the National Science Foundation supported curriculum projects initiated in 1956 What the historical record reveals according to Rudolph is that these materials were designed not just to improve American science education but to advance the professional interest of the American scientific community in the postwar period as well

The Imperial Discipline Alexander E Davis, Vineet Thakur, Peter Vale, 2020-11-20 This book questions the accepted origins of the field of International Relations IR Commonly understood to have emerged from the horrors of WW1 with the goal of bringing about world peace the authors argue that on the contrary IR came from a somewhat less noble tradition that of the Round Table The Round Table were a network of imperialists emerging in the late 1800s across five key British imperial societies Australia Canada New Zealand South Africa and India Their aim was to improve imperial governance placing the empire into a position to control world affairs Although they ultimately failed to rearrange world order according to their vision they did help to build what we now call the discipline of IR The Round Table's scientific method for the study of world affairs was rapidly subsumed into each geopolitical context Through telling this story the authors recover it and interrogate its meanings for the discipline of IR today They show the importance of the Global South to IR s foundations and argue that IR scholarship in this period was intertwined with imperial racial thought in ways that it should not and cannot forget Who's who of Southern Africa ,2006 Vols for 1967 70 include as a section Who s who of Rhodesia Mauritius Central and East Africa Implementing Sustainable Development Claudia María Vargas,Phillip J.
