

Lack of Motivation in English Language Learners

10 pages | 2497 words

Introduction

Living in the generation of global integration, to learn a new language as a second language is essential. English language is now being considered as an important factor for our future as some countries in the world are using English as the second language. Moreover, it is being acknowledged something like a passport to a better education as well as employment opportunities (Shaik Riyaz Ahmad, 2016). Especially, in the 4th industrial evolution, not only English but also other languages such as Korean, Japanese, Chinese, etc. also play an important role in our future life. English nowadays is the official language of over 53 countries in the world, the official language of E.U and the third language to be used widely in the world after Chinese and Spanish (based on the differences in countries' population). As such, it's easy to be seen that English can bring us to a brighter future, or I can say, English brings opportunities to us. Specifically, we can have a chance of having a more stable job or a higher salary.

Problem

In spite of the fact that English is necessary, there are many people, especially students refuse the importance of it, or I can say, they don't want to learn English. Why? There are many reasons for a person, a student to avoid learning English. A study shows that the procrastination in students was caused by laziness, lack of inspiration, teacher's guidance, their relationship in school/class, environment, etc. That leads to many problems that affect badly on students, which are their personalities, their learning and their achievement in all subjects (Irshad Hussain & Sarwat Sultan, 2010) especially on second language learning. Specifically, English compares to Vietnamese is much more complex since there are many differences among grammar, vocabularies, phonemes, etc. In my opinion, it raises the laziness in learning English or second language of students or people in common. Many students, especially university students find it's boring to learn a new language, although knowing the need of it. Jill Sherain showed that motivation directly influence the input of second language learning, and emphasize that it is "extremely important" to have a great motivation while learning the second language (1994) and English is not an exception (thêm reference). Moreover, I think it is important for the trainers to inspire their trainees not only in languages but also in other subjects. And due to the recent problem, which is university students are now finding it is boring to learn English so they refuse to use it, to learn it or they do learn English but it is hard for them to use or remember.

Purpose

The purpose of this study is to examine the relationship between bad attitude in learning English and the lack of motivation in inspiring languages for students in selected universities in Ha Noi, Viet Nam. Not only will this research provides an understanding into the psychology of students who are studying second languages, but it will also give teachers a different perspective on teaching, which could be used to motivate English learners to work more productively. Due to the above problems, I...
