There is a great need for a more powerful "data visualization" software. The current state of affairs is that the only way to get a good idea of what a data set looks like is to look at a scatter plot. This is a very limited view of the data, and it is often difficult to see the underlying structure. A more powerful tool would allow us to see the data in a more comprehensive way, and it would be able to handle large data sets. This is a very important need, and it is one that should be addressed by the software industry.
