Sławomir Masłoń, 2007 Disarming the Novel Thomas D. Farnell, 2003 The Booker Prize and the Legacy of Empire Luke Strongman, 2002 This book is about the Booker Prize the London based literary award made annually to the best novel written in English by a writer from one of those countries belonging to or formerly part of the British Commonwealth The approach to the Prize is thematically historical and spans the award period to 1999 The novels that have won or shared the Prize in this period are examined within a theoretical framework mapping the literary terrain of the fiction Individual chapters explore themes that occur within the larger narrative formed by this body of novels collectively invoked cultures social trends and movements spanning the stages of imperial heyday and decline as perceived over the past three decades Individually and collectively the novels mirror often in terms of more than a single static image British imperial culture after empire contesting and reinterpreting perceptions of the historical moment of the British Empire and its legacy in contemporary culture The body of Booker novels narrates the demise of empire and the emergence of different cultural formations in its aftermath The novels are grouped for discussion according to the way in which they deal with aspects of the transition from empire to a post imperial culture from early imperial expansion through colonization retrenchment decolonization and postcolonial pessimism to the emergence of tribal nationalisms and post imperial nation states The focus throughout is primarily literary and contingently cultural Secretary of the Invisible Mike Marais, 2009 How do individuals who are part of a community respond to the stranger as a stranger i e without simply positioning this outsider in opposition to the community in which they are located How may individuals receive something unknown and therefore surprising into their world without compromising it by identifying it in the terms of that world In this study Mike Marais traces the various ways in which Coetzee's fiction from Dusklands through to Slow Man repeatedly poses such questions of hospitality It is shown that the form of ethical action staged in Coetzee's writing is grounded not in the individual's willed and rational achievement but in his or her invasion and possession by the strangeness of the stranger. This ethic of hospitality Marais argues has a strong aesthetic dimension for Coetzee: the writer is inspired to write by being acted upon by a force from beyond the phenomenal world. The writer is a secretary of the invisible. She or he is responsible to and for the invisible. Marais maintains that this understanding of writing as an involuntary response to that which exceeds history is evident from the first in Coetzee's fiction. In readings of the novels of the apartheid era he traces this writer's rueful ironic awareness of the limited even incidental form of political engagement that may emanate from such an aesthetic. He then goes on to argue that if it is the writer's obligation to render visible the invisible, writing must be a task that can never be completed. What is more, such writing is thus bound to be iterative in form. With this in mind he traces the structural similarities between Coetzee's writing of the apartheid period and his post-apartheid and Australian writing, arguing that the later texts are self-reflexively aware of their endlessly repetitive nature. These contentions are developed incrementally through close readings of the individual novels that focus on recurring metaphors of hospitality: visitor, the stranger, the house, the castaway, the invisible, the dream, and the child. Life and Times of Michael K in the Light of Iqbalian Khudi Tasawar Ali, 2011

Abstract This paper draws a parallel between Allama Mohammad Iqbal's concept of khudi and J. M. Coetzee's novel Life and Times of Michael K. Khudi means the recognition of self, the realization of full potential in an individual. A fully realized individual is a prerequisite for a healthy, peaceful society. The central theme in Life and Times of Michael K is the celebration and realization of such individuality. Coetzee depicts a subject-centred ethic of political system in this novel while urging the individual to rewrite his identity by soaring above and seeing through such ideologies as naturalness and rootedness. Both Iqbal and Coetzee agree upon the fact that only mentally free and spiritually strong individuals are capable of forming a peaceful society. Freedom comes by being able to carefully decipher the state's divisive practices and by developing the selfhood or personality known as khudi. Walls and Cultural Spaces, 2025-10-23. This volume explores the material and symbolic meanings of walls and their manifestations in history, literature, cultural studies, music, and ecocriticism. The diverse and original ways in which this topic is treated testify to the volume's multidisciplinary scope. Life & Times of Michael K: A Novel, 2015. Space and Identity in J.M. Coetzee's Life & Times of Michael K, 2022. Occupying colonial governments establish and maintain power through the demarcation and control of space, a process Sara Upstone terms overwriting. In Life and Times of Michael K, Coetzee imagines the complication of establishing and maintaining a self-identity amid the strict control of space in post-apartheid wartime South Africa, and it is this conflict of identity which comprises the novel's subplot. The reader follows Michael K's odyssey over hundreds of miles in his quest to find the farm on which his mother was born and raised. His journey is repeatedly thwarted by state actors who enforce a strict control of movement through spaces.

designated and ordered by the South Africa government reflecting how oppressive state power structures impose arbitrary constructs of space which disrupt pre existing spatial connotations within the same geography In this essay I employ a close reading of Coetzee s fourth novel and incorporate spatial theory self identity and place identity theory as well as preceding scholarly inquiry into the novel to argue that the influence of spatial contexts on the protagonist s struggle to form and maintain his self identity comprises the novel s central theme
