Four Exemplars of Ru   (Confucianism) Paul J. D'Ambrosio, Geir Sigur sson, Dimitra Amarantidou, Hans-Georg Moeller, 2025-08-15 This book discusses scholars who have all engaged in comparative philosophy projects many of whom first rose to fame because of their penetrating insights into the similarities and differences in Western and Chinese thought They all went beyond simply looking at how one thinker one school or one tradition relates to another each draws on sources from China and the West However their projects from role ethics to concrete metaphysics from critiquing individualism to balancing harmony and justice are attempts at re evaluating the way we view the world and live our lives These projects are systematic thorough and comprehensive descriptions of ourselves the world and our interactions with others They are all comparative but on top of this they also aim at making a point that transcends their comparisons The book thus shows that these great thinkers draw on a multiplicity of resources and while they might find some ideas closer to home than others comparison is a necessary constant Using traditional Confucian vocabulary this type of philosophizing is described as practicing xue normally understood as studying or learning But it also means to copy imitate model or emulate In the process of xue one imitates but with a nod to differences This book honors four models of such an attitude to xue In its examination of some of the most influential scholars in Chinese thought this is a seminal book for scholars and students in Chinese and comparative philosophy

Department of Basic Education, 2016 Modeling Individual Differences in Perceptual Decision Making Joseph W. Houpt, Cheng-Ta Yang, James T. Townsend, 2017-01-18 To deal with the abundant amount of information in the environment in order to achieve our goals human beings adopt a strategy to accumulate some information and filter out other information to ultimately make decisions Since the development of cognitive science in the 1960s researchers have been interested in understanding how human beings process and accumulate information for decision making Researchers have conducted extensive behavioral studies and applied a wide range of modeling tools to study human behavior in simple detection tasks and two choice decision tasks e g discrimination classification In general researchers often assume that the manner in which information is processed for decision making is invariant across individuals given a particular experimental context Independent variables including speed accuracy instructions stimulus properties i e intensity and characteristics of the participants i e aging cognitive ability are assumed to affect the parameters in a model i e speed of information accumulation response bias but not the way that participants process information e g the order of information processing Given these assumptions much modeling has been accomplished based on the grouped data rather than the individual data However a growing number of studies have demonstrated that there were individual differences in the perceptual decision process In the same task context different groups of the participants may process information in different manners The capacity and architecture of the decision mechanism were found to vary across individuals implying that humans decision strategies can vary depending on the context to maximize their performance In this special issue we focused on a particular subset of cognitive models particularly accumulator models multinomial processing trees and systems factorial technology SFT as applied to perceptual decision making The motivation for the focus on perceptual decision making is threefold Empirical studies of perception have grown out of a history of making a large number of observations for each individual so as to achieve precise estimates of each individual s performance This type of data rather than a small number of observations per individual is most amenable to achieving precision in individual level and group level cognitive modeling Second the interaction between the acquisition of perceptual information and the decisions based on that information to the extent that those processes are distinguishable offers rich data for scientific exploration Finally there is an increasing interest in the practical application of individual variation in perceptual ability whether to inform perceptual training and expertise or to guide personnel decisions Although these practical applications are beyond the scope of this issue we hope that the research presented herein may serve as the foundation for future endeavors in that domain

The Cognition of Sequences Snehlata Jaswal, 2018-01-24 It is impossible to perceive the innumerable stimuli impinging on our senses all at once Out of the myriad stimuli external and internal a few are selected for further processing and even among these we try to put each in some sort of relation with the others to be able to make some sense about them all Time of course is an elementary dimension we use to organize our experiences Thus the perception of sequences is basic to human cognition Nevertheless research addressing sequences is rather sparse Partly this is due to difficulty in designing experiments in this area due to huge individual differences Then there is the assumption that temporal order has more to do with memory than perception Another problem is that sequences seem endemic to the auditory world So much so that some researchers have suggested that sound provides the auditory scaffolding for sequencing behavior Little wonder that research studies addressing sequences in modalities other than audition are extremely rare This research topic aimed to gather a holistic picture of sequencing behaviour among humans by collecting snapshots of the current research on the topic of sequencing We particularly sought contributions which addressed sequences beyond the auditory modality The single unifying criteria for these diverse contributions was that they shed new light on previously unexplored empirical relationships and or provoked new lines of research with incisive ideas regarding sequencing behavior Seasoned researchers contributed their views on perception memory and production of sequences
