

Meiosis

Meiosis is the special form of cell division used to produce gametes. It has two important functions:

- To form haploid cells with half the normal chromosome number
- To re-arrange the chromosomes with a novel combination of genes (genetic recombination)

Meiosis comprises two successive divisions, without DNA replication in between. The second division is a bit like mitosis, but the first division is different in many important respects. The details are shown in this diagram for a hypothetical cell with 2 pairs of homologous chromosomes ($n=2$):

First Division		Second Division
Interphase I • chromatin not visible • DNA & proteins replicated		Interphase II • Short • no DNA replication • chromosomes remain visible.
Prophase I • chromosomes visible • homologous chromosomes join together to form a bivalent		Prophase II • centrioles replicate and move to new poles.
Metaphase I • bivalents line up on equator		Metaphase II • chromosomes line up on equator.
Anaphase I • chromosomes separate (not chromatids- centromere doesn't split)		Anaphase II • centromeres split • chromatids separate.
Telophase I • nuclei form • cell divides • cells have 2 chromosomes, not 4 chromatids.		Telophase II • 4 haploid cells, each with 2 chromatids • cells often stay together to form a tetrad.
