Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and blood pressure (BP) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a training group. The control group consisted of 10 men who did not exercise regularly. The training group consisted of 10 men who participated in a 12-week training program. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions were performed on a treadmill at a speed of 3.0 mph and a 5% incline. The HR and BP were measured at rest and during exercise at the beginning and end of the training program. The results showed that the training group had a significant decrease in HR and BP compared to the control group. The HR decreased from 170 to 150 beats per minute, and the BP decreased from 140/90 to 120/80 mmHg. The control group showed no significant change in HR and BP. These results suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively reduce HR and BP in sedentary, middle-aged men.
