Life and Gabriella Ellen Gholson Glasgow,2014-11-21 PRESENTS A SHAMELESS HEROINE

After a day of rain the sun came out suddenly at five o'clock and threw a golden bar into the deep Victorian gloom of the front parlour. On the window sill midway between the white curtains a pot of blue hyacinths stood in a cracked china plate and as the sunlight shone into the room the scent of the blossoms floated to the corner where Gabriella was patiently pulling basting threads out of the hem of a skirt. For a minute her capable hands stopped at their work and raising her smooth dark head she looked compassionately at her sister Jane who was sitting like a frozen image of martyrdom in the middle of the long horsehair sofa. Three times within the last twelve months Jane had fled from her husband's roof to the protection of her widowed mother, a weak person of excellent ancestry who could hardly have protected a sparrow had one taken refuge beneath her skirt. Twice before Mrs Carr had wept over her daughter's woes and returned her a sullen saint to the arms of the discreetly repentant Charley, but to-day while the four older children were bribed to good behaviour with bread and damson preserves in the pantry and the baby was contentedly playing with his rubber ring in his mother's arms Gabriella had passionately declared that Jane must never never go back. Nothing so dreadful as this had ever happened before for the repentant Charley had been discovered making love to his wife's dressmaker, a pretty French girl whom Jane had engaged for her spring sewing because she had more style than had fallen to the austere virtuous lot of the Carr's regular seamstress Miss Folly Hatch. I might have known she was too pretty to be good, moaned Jane while Mrs Carr in her willow rocking chair by the window wiped her reddened eyelids on the strip of cambric ruffling she was hemming.
